FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

This was the show I was directing that was supposed to open when the world shut down in 2020, so I have been waiting a while to tell it again, and I am excited that you are all here to see it! It is a special show for a lot of reasons...it is a simple telling of a complex story and one of these characters will more than likely ring familiar with most of you. This story makes you question whether there is such a thing as destiny, fate, the power of suggestion or the law of attraction. It begs the question of whether it is all just some random sequence of events or happenstance.

This show does what theatre is supposed to do...it gets you thinking. And feeling. And pondering what happens in the dark when it comes to light. How does it ripple into the lives of those to whom we are closest? And does it collide in ways that could be tragic and irreversible?

Enjoy this metaphysical musical, FLY BY NIGHT...and thank you for supporting the Limelight Theatre!

Director's Note

This story begins in the aftermath of a loss of the mom and wife of the century, Cecily Smith. But FLY BY NIGHT is truly the exploration of every character's navigation of loss in their personal lives. It looks deeply into the human condition and the need in every heart to be seen and find authentic connection. There are themes of love and romance, but it is a much deeper than that.

The intersection of lives in this story reveals how we look desperately to the other people in our circles to validate us, value us, give us worth, and make us significant. But when they fail, we often just look to someone else until we find that person who really sees us. Very possibly, however, the issue lies inside of us and the need to find our own self love and acceptance, following our own path with independence and confidence.

Our paths may at times be solitary, but we are all actually connected in ways that we cannot see that affect us in ways we may never understand. As the energy shifts with each person that we meet and every action that is made, it is like the butterfly effect. For those who have never heard this term, it is the concept that small changes (the mere flapping of a butterfly's wings) can lead to largely altered outcomes (like a change in the weather,) making the future completely unpredictable by a practically invisible and unmeasurable action. And if you believe that this can happen, every choice you make and action you take may be made with greater intent and caution.

This is what you will see tonight...an invisible ripple that changes the world in its own way. And nothing can stop this ripple...not even total darkness.
