FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

One of my fondest memories of the growing up years with my kids (and I admit that this could be because I am a storyteller at heart) was the times that I watched musicals with them either on TV or in the theatre. One of my favorite musicals that I ever watched with them was Hairspray. It wasn't just because of the amazing songs and the great dance numbers, but it was because through that story, I had a reason to talk to my kids about a time in history that, up until that point, they could not envision or imagine, and subsequently watched them become more empathetic human beings. The subject of integration and what the Black community went through leading up to and during the 60's has rarely been so colorfully, accurately, and thoughtfully dramatized in an American musical. Great theatre should seek to change something in the minds, hearts, and souls of those who see it. And hopefully, if it tells the truth, people will be changed in the way they think, feel, act, or believe after having witnessed that truth. The art of live storytelling has the power to impact, inspire, and unite. I know that this show will do that. While incredibly entertaining, Hairspray is reminiscent of a time in history that we never want to return to, but also a time that we never want to forget. In the remembering, we become grateful for how far we've come and inspired to create a more compassionate and empathetic humanity. In addition to those values, I hope you also feel joy in seeing a story that represents inclusion for all types of people and draw strength from the strength that you see in the characters on this stage. I hope you'll take that as the biggest gift from the LIMELIGHT. And in response, you will BE A LIGHT and SHARE THE LIGHT with others. Thank you for your support for the Limelight and for attending live theatre!

From the playwright:

“I’ve been criticized for making people look cheap or stupid in my plays. I don’t know; I always thought I was reflecting myself. Really, I love the characters in my plays. When they try to trick each other into saying ‘I love you,’ or when they worry about things that don’t exist, that’s when I feel for them most.”

“I’d like it if people saw my train-table dolls and then looked at each other with a little more love, because I love us people, not in spite of our weakness, but because of it, too. We have such good intentions.”

-MARK O’DONNELL

Director’s Note

Thank you all for coming out to see our production of Hairspray. These past eight weeks, I have had the privilege of getting to work alongside some of the nicest, most hardworking people, and I cannot be prouder of the work they achieved in such a short period of time. For the past two months, thirty strangers came together five nights a week for two and half hours and chose to work together towards one common goal. As you get to see the results of the work, please know that this process created so much more than what is on the stage. Thirty people shared their struggles, put aside their differences, found their commonalities and through sweat, laughter, and a few tears, created bonds, friendships and love. We invite you to watch this show and enjoy yourself, please enjoy the music, the dancing, the nostalgia, and style that was the 1960’s. But I hope you see its message as well. I hope you see Tracy Turnblad for who she is. I hope you can be inspired by her courage and bravery. And I hope as you leave, you take a little piece of her with you into the real world knowing that we are always better together than divided.

Thank you,

Love Jonny
